

Sarah Weslosky is the General Motors Information Technology Director for Global Purchasing and Supply Chain - Strategic Planning and Compliance. She has more than 25 years of experience at General Motors in the Information Technology and Global Purchasing and Supply Chain area.

Sarah has an MBA from the University of Michigan - Stephen M. Ross School of Business and is also a member of Beta Gamma Sigma. Her career began with General Motors after completing a Bachelor of Business Administration in Management Information Systems from the University of Michigan. She is a certified PMP with the Project Management Institute.

While at General Motors, her career evolved from programmer/analyst to senior analyst before moving cross-functionally into General Motors Production Control and Scheduling focused on performing several roles in supply chain management. She then further advanced into the General Motors Purchasing organization as a senior buyer of direct material, where she continued to enhance her strong foundation of automotive experience. Sarah continued to excel in her career path at General Motors by moving into the General Motors Information Technology organization, where she has held a number of global IT leadership positions with increasing responsibilities in systems development/deployment, program management, strategic planning, and compliance

Sarah serves on the Advisory Board of the Michigan Council of Women in Technology, and has previously served as the co-chair of the Michigan Council of Women in Technology Events Committee. She strongly supports the mission of MCWT and is proud to be part of this organization. Her personal and professional success is strongly supported by her family, including her husband and three sons.